30 Christmas Family Feud-Style Questions (with Answers)

By Paul, dad of 8. Every question here has survived our own family game nights.

Planning a church Christmas party, a youth group night, or the long afternoon after Christmas dinner? Here are 30 Christmas feud-style survey questions, each with its answers ranked most popular first, in three groups: the Christmas story from the Bible, Christmas at church, and Christmas at home. The Bible boards list the verse behind them so you can read it together afterward. Print this page, download the free PDF, or put the game on your TV and let two teams play from their phones.

How to play at a Christmas party

- Two teams, one host. The host holds the printout and reads each prompt aloud. Mix the ages on both teams.
- Face-off for control. One player from each team comes up; the higher-ranked answer wins the board for their team.
- Keep guessing until three misses. The team in control answers one player at a time until it finds every answer or misses three times. Then the other team gets one guess to steal the points.
- Score by rank. 30 points for the top answer, then 25, 20, 15, 10, and 5 down the board. Double the points on the last board so nobody is out of it early.
- End with the story. After the last board, read Luke 2:8–14 aloud. It lands differently after an hour of laughing together.

The Christmas Story

Ten boards from Matthew 1 and 2 and Luke 1 and 2, each with the verse behind it. Good for a Sunday school class, a youth group, or the opening round at a church Christmas party.

1. Name a dream God sent in the Christmas story.

Hosting tips for every kind of Christmas crowd

- After Christmas dinner. Play the Christmas at Home boards first, while the dishes soak. Kids against grown-ups is a classic, and the kids usually win the stocking board.
- Church Christmas party. Run two captains at the front and let each half of the fellowship hall shout suggestions. Ten boards take about thirty minutes, which leaves room for dessert and the carol sing.

- Youth group. Play for something small: the losing team stacks the chairs, or the winners pick the next game. The pageant and pastor boards land best with teens who grew up in the church.
- Sunday school. Use the Christmas Story group as review the week before Christmas, and let a different child look up each board's verse.

Make it a whole Christmas game night

Survey boards are the loud act. For a quieter round with one right answer, the Christmas Bible trivia quiz has 60 questions you can play right on the page, including a true-or-false round on what the carols added to the story. Our Bible charades word lists get everyone out of their chairs, and the year-round Bible feud-style questions have 40 more boards for the next game night. Running the whole church event? The free church game night kit has a 60-minute run-of-show and bulletin copy ready to go.

Common questions

What are good Christmas Family Feud questions for church?

Mix the three kinds on this page. Open with a board everyone can win, like the Christmas movies or the car ride to Grandma's, so every team gets on the scoreboard early. Then play the Christmas story boards, which send people back to Matthew 1 and 2 and Luke 1 and 2, and close with the church boards, because nothing gets a fellowship hall laughing like the pageant that went wrong. Every board is written for a church audience, so there is nothing to skip.

How do you play Christmas Family Feud-style with a big group?

Split into two teams and call one player from each to the front. Read a prompt; whoever answers first with the higher-ranked answer wins control of the board for their team. That team keeps guessing, one player at a time, until it has found every answer or missed three times. After the third miss, the other team huddles and gets one guess to steal the points. Score 30 for the top answer, then 25, 20, 15, 10, and 5. In a big room, let each side shout suggestions to its team.

Are these Christmas questions good for kids and mixed ages?

Yes. The Christmas at Home group needs no Bible knowledge, so a six-year-old's guess can be the top answer on the board. The Christmas Story group works for kids who know the nativity story, and every board there lists its verse so you can read it together afterward. Put a child and a grandparent on each team and the scores stay close.

Is there a free printable Christmas feud-style PDF?

Yes. The button at the top of this page downloads all 30 boards with their ranked answers, formatted for letter paper. Print one copy for the host and keep it face down. It is free for home, school, and church use, with no signup.

Can we play Christmas feud-style questions on a TV?

Yes. Faith Family Showdown puts a survey board on any TV or projector: two teams scan a code and play from their phones, answers flip over with sound effects, and the game keeps score. The free version includes a starter pack, and the Christmas & Thanksgiving pack adds 22 holiday boards. The boards on this page are written for reading aloud, so they are different questions from the game's packs.

Are these questions original?

Yes. Every board on this page was written for it and checked against the game's paid packs, so nothing here gives away a question someone bought, and none of it is copied from other trivia sites.

Faith Family Showdown is an independent game and is not affiliated with, endorsed by, or connected to Fremantle's Family Feud®. "Family Feud" is referenced only to describe the familiar survey-game style.

Want to play these live on a TV?

Faith Family Showdown is a free Bible game show for church and family. The board goes on the TV, two teams play from their phones, and every round ends with a short reflection. Scan the code or visit faithshowdown.com to try it.
